

What the new NDIS laws mean for you

Your current plan does not change straight away.

Keep using your plan and supports as usual. The NDIS will tell you before a change affects you.

Your plan and reviews

- Some funding may change when your plan is reassessed or renewed.
- Funding changes will not be backdated.

Asking for a change

- You, your nominee or child representative can ask for an early reassessment.
- The NDIA has 90 days to decide whether to reassess.

Your plan money

- From February 2027, some plans may be renewed with the same supports.
- Unused money from an old plan will not carry into the renewed plan.

Keep your records

- New record-keeping rules are coming.
- Participants will need to keep support and payment records for 3 years.

Reply when the NDIS contacts you

- The NDIS may ask you or your nominee for information.
- A plan may be suspended only after reasonable attempts to contact you. This means at least 5 attempts over an extended period.
- Tell the NDIS if your phone, email or address changes.

Your rights still matter

- You can ask questions and get help to understand a decision.
- You can ask for a plan variation for short-term or urgent changes.
- You can request a plan change when your disability needs or circumstances significantly change.

Not sure what a change means? Ask for help before agreeing or paying.

Your Support Coordinator, nominee or Newidafe can help you.
